

I Have A Dream Summary

'I have a dream' is a speech delivered by Martin Luther King on the of Lincoln memorial in Washington on August 28, 1963. This great American had signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This enlightened a ray of hope in the hearts of billions of Negro slaves who had till now scorched in the fire of contemptibleness and selfishness. This brought a new morning of freedom to demolish the night of slavery. the

But a century later, we find that negroes are still disabled because of handcuffs of isolation (on racial basis) and the fetters of dicrimnation. Now, Negroes are forced to live with poverty in a vast world of prosperity. They are forced to live the life of a deported person although they are the natives. America is neglecting its duty towards negroes and instead of providing them facilities, the negroes are overlaid by the nation. In this speech king says that although their nation is not supporting them, justice is still present on the planet and he is sure that they will get freedom, their rights some day. He says that it's not the time to sit and stare but the right time to rise up and ask for racial justice, to live with fraternity. He says, it would prove dangerous for the nation to think the negroes weak. The fair satiableness of negroes will never be satisfied until they get freedom and equity. He announces that 1963 is not the end but the beginning of the revolt and this revolt will cause the nation to tremble untill the negroes get justice. He says that we'll protest peacefully and do not let it converted into physical violence. We'll act morally against the immoral he says that there are many whites who believe that our and their destination are same and so we should not mistrust all the whites. He says that we should pledge to always stay ahead. He says that the votaries of civil right can never be satisfied until we dont get our rights and justice. He says that he knows many have suffered because of raising their voice against injustice but they should keep faith that sufferings always result.

He says that we should return to our homes with a hope that we will get justice sooner or later. He says that inspite of obstacles and hindrances, he has a droon. His dream is that some day racial discrimination would come to an end. He has a dream that one day the sons of slaves would share the table of fraternity. He has a dream that Mississippi which is scorching in the swelter of force, tyranny will calm with justice and freedom. He has a dream that his children do not suffer discrimination because of their colour but be known by their moral character. He has a dream that in Alabama black children walk hands in hands with white ones. He has a dream that separation on the basis of race, colour and creed will no more be there. He says that this hope with which he will return home and he is sure that with this hope and unity, they will be able to cross all the obstacles and obstructions in their way and will be free one day. This day the children of god will thank him and pray to him to let the freedom prevade. He says that a time will come when, all the America will ring with freedom and the people of all colour, caste and creed with hand in hand will sing the old Negro spiritual words that are-Free at last and will thank god the almighty.
